

What is the problem we address?

The conflict in Ukraine is waged to a large extent in the mass media and one-sided accounts on both sides narrow down the common ground for dialogue. Ukrainians and Russians hardly have opportunities to speak to each other, which limits their exposure to alternative viewpoints of the background of the current conflict and hinders citizens of both societies to see the common ground they might share. At the same time, there is no inclusive dialogue of all countries and groups involved in the conflict. This leads to a fundamental lack of consensus about the roots of the conflict and possible solutions to it.

What are our goals?

We want to give Russians, Ukrainians and Germans, who are interested in a constructive dialogue, the opportunity to participate in “Trilateral Peace Talks” in Berlin. Together, we seek to establish a common understanding of the conflict’s origins, its framing in the media and possible solutions to bringing it to an end. By cooperating in the organization of the event, and by discussing and sharing our opinions at the conference itself, we develop long-lasting and regular relationships that will enable participants to take on the role of “social multipliers” within their personal network.

How do we want to reach these goals?

In order to better get to know each other and to foster the buildup of trust, the program features various recreational activities that the whole group will participate in. In parallel, two workshop sessions on inter-personal and political conflict resolution will help to enable the participants to engage in a productive dialogue. The thematic part of the program will build on this introduction: experienced experts alongside participants hold short presentations on one of the three main topics. Each presentation is followed by a discussion and a summary of its results in working groups. Further, we will present our key findings at a “Citizen Talk”. This closing event will be attended by German citizens, representatives of the media and civil society as well as German parliamentarians who are interested in interactively discussing the results of the conference.

Who may participate and how?

We have already received more than 160 applications from Ukraine and Russia, and we are glad to announce that the application process is now open to German applications. If you are 30 years or younger, have a demonstrated interest in politics and sufficient command of the English language, we kindly invite you to apply with a written thematic proposal. Your proposal should be no longer than 550 words and deal with ONE of the following topics: 1)

Roots of the conflict, 2) Framing of the Conflict in the Media or 3) Possible solutions to the conflict. You can analyze the topic of your choice in many possible ways – be it from a political, economic, historical or philosophical perspective. You are free to choose unconventional approaches and hold controversial opinions but you have to offer arguments and facts that support your analysis. Whatever topic you choose, we will not judge your opinion in any way. Rather, it is important that you base your statements on well-grounded arguments. The better your arguments, the easier it will be for the other participants to understand and even share your position and the more constructive will be our dialogue. Your proposal will serve as the basis for your short presentation during the conference.

Please send your English-language proposal and a CV to peacetalks@ifair.eu by April 10th (we only accept your application if you send us your proposal and CV in ONE document).

How much will this cost me?

We will cover your accommodation from May 1st to May 5th. Currently, we are securing additional funding in order to provide for your catering during the same period and to make a financial contribution to your travel expenses.

Where and when will the event take place?

The “Trilateral Peace Talks” take place at the Hertie School of Governance, Friedrichstraße 180, Berlin, from 1 to 4 May 2015. In addition, we will hold background discussions and benefit from the cultural activities at other locations in Berlin.

Do you have problems or questions?

If you have any questions, please send an email to Yulia.Yarina@ifair.eu.
